This, O king, is the reason why there is such a thing as dying before ones time. 49. And have you ever heard, O king, of a crop that had grown, and was bent down by the weight of the grains of corn, the ears having duly formed when a so-called Karaka rain (hail-storm)² falling on it, destroyed it We have both heard of such a thing, Sir, and have seen it, too. Well, O king! would you say the crop was destroyed in season or out of season Out of season, Sir. For if the hail-storm had not come the crop would have lasted to harvest time. What then, O king! on a disaster intervening the crop is lost, but if no injury is done it, it survives to the harvest That is so, Sir. Just so, O king,...
